DR. PETER CHEE(RIGHT) IS IN CHARGE OF THE CLINICAL SERVICES OF SJH

Located on the eastern shore of the Cheung Chau Island

The Cheung Chau Hospital was founded by the St. John Ambulance Association, and was simply known as St. John Hospital. The foundation stone of this Victorian-style construction was laid by the tycoon brothers Mr Aw Boon Haw and Mr Aw Boon Par in 1932. In November 1934, it was donated to the Hong Kong St John Ambulance Association as a tuberculosis sanatorium. It was therefore officially called the St John Ambulance Association Haw Par Hospital after the names of the donors.

A DOCTOR WAS WORKING IN A&E OF SJH

The casualty service at SJH began in the 1950s. The early casualty department was located on the first floor of the building. A team of four doctors was led in the early days by a senior medical officer(SMO) from the Department of Health. Junior doctors shared their duties on 24-hour roster. The department of radiology went into service since 1974, providing services during office hours. After office hours, patients had to be transferred to an urban hospital if urgent imaging was required.

The first pathology/biochemical laboratory was officially opened in July 1987. This provided comprehensive support to both in-patients and A&E patients until its closure on 31 July 2000. Thereafter urgent biochemical tests were performed by several point-of-care-test machines, such as Reflotron and istat machines. A mini-blood bank was established in the casualty department in early 1986. Since then, the hospital had been allowed to stock two units of blood for emergency resuscitation.

NON-URGENT AMBULANCE AT SJH

Under management of the Hospital Authority in December 1991, further improvements were made. The first Aloka portable ultrasound machine was donated by the daughter of Mr Aw Boon Haw in 1994. The triage system was adopted in 1996 when the new "Computerized Management System" was introduced.

MAIN ENTRANCE OF THE A&E

Trainees in Emergency Medicine from Ruttonjee Hospital/Tang Siu Kin Hospital began to bolster services at SJH in 2001 and the quality of A&E services greatly improved. The team of A&E doctors expanded to seven and was led by an emergency medicine specialist as the Associate Consultant in 2004.

An A&E follow-up clinic was put into service in late 2004. It was managed by an emergency medicine specialist.
